

ABSTRACT

Transportation and distribution play a key role in the successful functioning of any logistical operation. Problems dealing with packing of vehicle containers and routing of these vehicles in an efficient manner pose a significant challenge in the area of Operations Research in particular and Management Science in general. In layman terms,